The Clan Graham. Few families can boast of more historical renown. Their founder, according to tradition, was a famous warrior who in 420 breached the wall which bounded the Roman occupation of Scotland. The chief of the Grahams was a strong supporter of Sir William Wallace who freed Scotland from the English yoke. At the Battle of Flodden, in 1513, the head of the house fell by the King's side. "The Great Montrose" is an imperishable memory in Scottish history. He was devoted to the Stuart cause, and died on the scaffold in 1650. The present head of the family is the Duke of Montrose. The battle march was "Killiecrankie" and the badge "Laurel."
